

Terms of use for the repository of the University of Applied Sciences for Business & Society BFI Vienna (UAS for Business & Society)

These terms of use regulate the use of the repository of the UAS for Business & Society.

Users may up- and download publications for their own private use, and in this context are obligated to comply with the following regulations:

1. All content provided is subject to the copyright law in the currently applicable version. Download and/or reproduction of publications without the authors' consent are only permitted for the user's own and private use. By uploading content, the users explicitly state their compliance with the Austrian copyright law requirements.
2. With the upload the author confers to the UAS for Business & Society the right to provide this content and its metadata non-exclusively, free of charge and for an indefinite period of time. This also includes the right to store, reproduce, edit and distribute this data, or convert it into a different format to preserve its access if necessary.
3. Publishing permission can be withdrawn by the author in written form (also via e-mail) at any time by directly contacting the library staff members. The campus-wide release of degree theses, which are required to be made publicly available by the library of the UAS for Business & Society according to § 19, section 3 FHG and according to the study and examination regulations, cannot be withdrawn. Theses with an approved non-disclosure application, will not be made available until the restriction period has expired.
4. Uploads must pass a formal check by library staff. The UAS for Business & Society reserves the right not to include any content without giving further reason, to subsequently restrict access to any content, or to end the provision of content, without users being able to derive or assert any claims.
5. The author assumes liability for any content and the correctness of personal data and metadata. The author is also liable should any part of their work infringe third-party rights. Use of the repository is at the user's own risk. All users will indemnify and hold harmless the UAS for Business & Society against all claims concerning the usage of the repository.
6. The UAS for Business & Society assumes no liability whatsoever should any provided content be unlawfully downloaded, spread or modified by third parties, or published without consent of the author.
7. The UAS for Business & Society assumes no liability for technical malfunctions and resulting problems or delay. The UAS for Business & Society also retains the right to modify or cease to provide the repository at any time, without further justification.
8. These terms of use may be modified when required at any time. The respective current version will be provided on the repository of the UAS for Business & Society.